

Vitalizing Your Alternative Workforce

FINEX INSIGHT

Alternative workforce (non-permanent or non-salaried) has become mainstream in some places and quickly becoming more popular in other areas. Various workforce engagement arrangements are replacing traditional full-time employment.

The shift will bring fundamental implications to businesses in terms of business model, HR management, company responsibilities as well as their profitability.

Whether your company is planning to eventually adopt alternative workforce in large scale, management and HR function should anticipate and plan for it properly and proactively, which can help to minimize corporate exposure to compliance risks, enhance morale and coherence significantly and provide a niche to attracting talents, creating a competitive edge to your business.

Finex shares with you our insights on important areas to consider in order to vitalize your alternative workforce:
